

DISPUTATION CXLIX

April 21, 2016

Dear Peucinians,

I look at myself and see only who I am. I turn to my hero and see who I want to be. Forget the cape - my hero embodies something that seems to always slip through my fingers. As my hero, she holds firm to that ideal and reminds me what end I am striving towards.

But as time wears on, my consideration of the following resolved grows...

RESOLVED: KILL OUR HEROES

Affirmative: Borgia '16

Negative: Diderot '19

Eventually, my hero's shadow blocks the sun, stunting my growth and keeping me frail. Among other things, the magnitude of their accomplishments reminds me what little I have achieved and does little to inspire me. I must now kill my hero. Upon landing that (figuratively) fatal blow, I free myself from the pull of her gravity.

On an unrelated/related note:

If you are interested in IVIES SWAG. Please reply to this email with your reservation (include your shirt size). SWAG this year will feature tasteful / badass Peucinian artwork. I hope to see you going hard in da paint with one of these on. Orders will be placed tomorrow evening - so please RSVP by the end of the meeting tomorrow.
